A meeting of the “Young Scientist” club was held at Shymkent University. The Department of Natural Sciences at Shymkent University held a regular meeting of the “Young Scientist” club.

The purpose of the meeting was to enhance students’ research skills, promote environmental awareness, and discuss current issues of nature conservation.

During the meeting, the following reports were presented:

1. “Water Resources: Ways to Save and Protect”
2. “Green Economy: The Key to Sustainable Development”

Club members shared their thoughts on the rational use of water, maintaining ecological balance, and the importance of the green economy for sustainable development.

At the end of the event, participants exchanged views on modern mechanisms for increasing environmental responsibility.

The Department of Natural Sciences noted that such scientific meetings contribute to broadening students’ environmental outlook and increasing their research activity.
